THE GIFT OF THE ROSARY

The Month of the Rosary

REACHING OUT IN TIMES OF NEED AND THANKSGIVING

I did not pray the Rosary early in my life, but rather when I was older with a young family. As a kid, my aunt who lived with our family always said the Rosary, but at the time I just chalked the prayer up as something "that aunts do." When I got confirmed, that same aunt bought me a beautiful Rosary as a confirmation gift. For years it collected dust in my bedside drawer as I went off to college and started work.

Then my young family (newborn baby and all) was thrust into the midst of a major personal crisis. I can't say what made me turn to it, but in that moment of need I reached for that Rosary in the drawer. At first, I learned the basics (I Our Father, 10 Hail Mary, 1 Glory Be; repeat x5). Then, I slowly learned about the Mysteries, and I strove to meditate on them. And I was/am grateful when God came/comes to me in those moments of prayer and meditation. The beautiful moments of consolation and connection have deepened my faith. And it was during this time that I started striving to say the Rosary daily. I normally try to say the rosary in the quiet of the morning or on my commute to work before the day (and my mind) get busy. Or as happens more often or not, I'm saying the Rosary at night before bed.

However, it is not always moments of great consolation or spiritual insight. There are also times of great dryness as with all prayer. I've found myself being distracted or without focus (for example trying to say the Rosary with kids running around). I'll admit that I've missed a day or two since I committed to saying the Rosary every day. But even in those moments of dryness and distraction, I try to remember that the Rosary as part of a twoway conversation. Sometimes God is talking to me, while the other times I am offering up my Rosary to God and thanking Him. Spending time with Him and our Blessed Mother even in those moments of dryness. Either way, the Rosary is no longer buried in my bedside table but always with me in my pocket. And I am so thankful for that.
